Lemon Grove resident draws crowd in Old Town

Every Friday and Saturday night from 9 p.m. to midnight, Charlie Morse parks his wheelchair at Bazaar del Mundo's Hamburguesa! and belts out a variety of contemporary tunes--from James Taylor to The Psychedelic Furs--enchancing locals and tourists alike.

After a motorcycle accident left him without the use of his legs in 1982, Morse decided to pursue his love for music.

He entered Hamburguesa!'s talent contest and earned first place with five Kenny Loggins songs, and he's been a regular ever since.

"I have a feel for this type of music," claims the 36-year old native San Diegan from Lemon Grove. His followers agree: according to Morse, 60 percent of the audience are repeat customers.

One out-of-state fan comes to the cantina every year to hear Morse sing. "Just pleasing that one fan, makes my singing all the more worthwhile," Morse declares.

A childhood sweetheart provoked Morse's career when he was 14. The girl loved guitar players and Morse set out to capture her heart. He saved $19 from his paper route, bought a guitar and song book, and learned three Beatles songs.

These songs didn't do for Morse what they did for the Beatles romance-wise, but he did write his first song after the whole incident: "Without Love."

Since then, he's composed over fifty songs. "They come from what I see happening around me," Morse remarked.

"One Friday Night," is his most popular. Morse wrote it for his bride, Julie, and sang it to her at their wedding five months ago.

When Morse isn't singing a few tunes at Hamurguesa! or working full-time at Dawn Electric as an estimator, he can be seen on the basketball court. An avid wheelchair basketball player, Morse plays for a top-ranked team, the San Diego City Knights.

"I enjoy being a team player," he said.

A team player he is, as his passion for music and pleasing his fans keep him and his audience coming back to the cantina year after year.

"If I had the time, I'd play seven nights a week," said Morse.

Undaunted by success, Morse knows he's made a good impression when the tables are full.

"The key to success is always trying to do my best. Even if I'm not at my best, I give what I've got."

Lemon Grove City Council pledges to fight drug and alcohol abuse

By Lisa Parsons

Mayor Jim Dorman opened Monday night's Lemon Grove City Council meeting by proclaiming the City's commitment to drug and alcohol abuse prevention, specifically, the national Red Ribbon campaign.

National Red Ribbon Week is October 21-28 and organizers of the campaign ask that citizens of Lemon Grove make a visible statement by wearing a red ribbon or tying one to their car, demonstrating their commitment to a drug-free way of life.

The council also voted to become a member of the Alcohol and Drug Prevention Taskforce and give a donation of $1,000. The Taskforce was originally founded by the City and County of San Diego as a joint effort at supporting programs and legislation for the elimination of drug and alcohol abuse in the County. It was founded in 1983 and in 1987 the membership was expanded to include elected officials from other cities in the county, as well as school districts and other elected officials. Councilman Craig Lake volunteered to represent Lemon Grove on the Taskforce.

The Council also discussed the purchase of a new traffic motorcycle and what to do with the old, surplus motorcycle. The Council voted to donate the old motorcycle to the Sheriff's Department Academy for motorcycle training, but before the motorcycle goes to the Academy, it will serve temporary duty at the Santee Sheriff's station while one of their motorcycles is being repaired.

In other business, the Council authorized the installation of a water main in Glencoe Drive to serve a development at the south end of Glencoe, which will be located in the City of San Diego, but will be accessed through Glencoe Drive. This development was controversial in the past because residents in the neighboring area objected to the density and the nature of the subdivision. The area had been zoned for this type of development for many years and the developer had the right to develop to the density that was proposed, so the City and the neighboring residents were unable to change the nature or density of the project. The City was able to obtain some minor improvements in the public improvement portion of the subdivision that would have a negative impact on the neighborhood, however.

Finally, the Council appointed two members to the Planning Commission, Robert Reynolds and Dwight Shelley, both incumbents.

It's Kiwanis apple time again

• Visions of biting into juicy Red Delicious apples sold by Lemon Grove Kiwanis members will become a reality next week.

"From October 23-27 at the corner of Central and Lemon Grove Way (the old Imperial Avenue) Lemon Grove Kiwanis will be manning the big truck again," said Dr. Ray Mollenhauer, Apple Day chairman.

"We'll be open on each of those days from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. to sell apples. If you can't come to the car to get your own apples, we'll gladly deliver them to you. How's that for making it easy?"

The club has not increased the price of its apples; it's still the same as in previous years: $20 for a full box of 100 apples; $10 for a half box (50 apples); and $5 for a quarter box (25).

"See your favorite Lemon Grove Kiwanis member for a order," Mollenhauer emphasized, "come to the car or phone us at 464-0390 to place a order." This is the biggest fund-raising event of the year for the local club which helps to fund senior programs and youth activities in Lemon Grove.

"Giggles" opens in Lemon Grove

A new bike shop has opened in Lemon Grove with an unusual name, Giggles.

The shop's owner Bill Donavant, who goes by "Mr. Giggles," said he discovered the name in Florida and it appealed to him as a catchy name. His daughter told him no little boys were going to come to a bike shop called "Giggles," but happily, she has been proved wrong.

Donavant opened a store in Spring Valley first, where he sold women's swimwear, took old time photos and sold bikes and skateboards. "I wasn't sure which would go," he said with a laugh. He sold his Spring Valley store to wander the Orient, but a need to bolster his finances brought him back to Lemon Grove.

The store features a variety of mountain bikes, skate decks and parts. Giggles is open seven days a week from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Donavant, an independent dealer, said he looks forward to meeting and serving the residents of Lemon Grove.

Leslie R. Ruh carries the responsibility of two jobs for the City of Lemon Grove, Public Works Director and City Engineer.

Ruh, who was born in Oakland and raised in Albany, Ca., attended a variety of schools including UC Berkeley where he studied engineering. He began his career with the City of Oakland in 1963 working on a survey party and traffic engineering. He then moved on to Petaluma where he spent nine years as the assistant city engineer. In 1986, when the City of Lemon Grove advertised for a Public Works Director/City Engineer, he saw the job as a unique career opportunity.

"It was a non-existent position," said Ruh. "The County had done the work before and it wasn't being done under the direct control of the City."

As Public Works Director, Ruh is responsible for a myriad of people and jobs ranging from street, park and building maintenance to maintaining traffic signals and overseeing the City's contract workers.

As City Engineer, one of his main jobs is to "review parcel maps and subdivision maps for both tentative and final maps." He also makes suggestions, as to "what kind of kind of things we would like built in order to get a project going." He is responsible for the inspection of streets and sewer lines as well. "We're in the process of hiring another engineer," said Ruh, "but at the moment, I'm a one-man department."

He said one of the big changes he sees coming to Lemon Grove will be Highway 125. "It will really effect crosstown traffic and lighten the load from Spring Valley," Ruh said. "There will be a definite adjustment to our traffic patterns."

Ruh lives in Spring Valley with his wife, Linda, and their two boys, Terry and Jeffrey. He said he and his family are very involved in soccer and flying model airplanes.

Open letter to residents of the south and east county: Thank you for saving water!

When the County Water Authority pipeline broke Sept. 28 in Scripps Ranch, we asked for your help. We needed you to dramatically reduce your water consumption until the break was repaired. Without such cutbacks, several water agencies were in danger of not having enough water for portions of their service areas.

And you came through with flying colors.

Water usage fell by as much as two-thirds in some areas.

None of the reservoirs went dry. No one went thirsty.

For this heroic effort, we thank you. You have our sincere gratitude for your cooperation and patience while the pipeline was being repaired. We couldn't have done it without your help.

What are we doing to lessen the chances of another similar situation? While no one can guarantee that a small section of pipe will never break, the Water Authority is in the midst of a $617 million Capital Improvement Program to improve the region's water delivery and storage system.

Over the next decade, the Authority will construct eight major pipeline projects and adjacent water storage facilities. Together, the projects will improve the reliability of our water delivery system.

In the meantime, your water agencies will continue to do their very best to supply you with an adequate amount of good drinking water. That's our job, and we look forward to working with you.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

Among the numerous problems created by California "legislation by proposition," is the danger of allowing voters to react in anger and outrage without either reading the small print or thinking things out. Many propositions represent "quick fix" popular responses to public resentments and, as a result, have little problem in gaining signatures for a place on the ballot. Once approved, they are impossible to enact (Proposition 103) or have long range ramifications that voters did not consider (Proposition 13).

Here in late 1990, we have excellent examples of this problem in Propositions 131 and 140. Each is designed to limit the terms-in-office of elected officials. Proposition 131 suggests a 12-year limit while Proposition 140 states that two or three terms are enough.

This apparently sounds awfully good to lots of people. Even Pete Wilson has come out for 140.

Entrenched incumbency and its ongoing 90-plus percent of re-election rate has raised hackles throughout the country.

This has been exacerbated by the current congressional budget follies as well as California's similar episode of recent memory.

"Throw all the rascals out" has become a national cry and the notion has surfaced that, if we can't vote them out, let's limit them out.

It is not an unattractive idea. Be they left or right, there are off-the-wall legislators who remain in office decade after decade for no discernible or logical reason. But the fact is, they do represent somebody. For every view point, no matter how inconsistent, crazy or bigoted, there is a constituency

On the limitation of terms in office out there that supports it.

It is this writer's guess that, with all the hoopla over "throwing the rascals out," the re-election of congressional incumbents will still top 80 percent.

And so, instead, we have efforts at term limitation. If we could somehow repeal human nature, these efforts might work effectively. But the idealistic notion that there is a corps of bright, influence-free, legislatively experienced future legislators waiting in the wings to make the Senate, House and State assemblies work more effectively, just doesn't ring true. Overbearing influence lives in or out of Congress and legislative experience takes a long time to develop. For an example of government by relative amateurs, one doesn't have to look any further than the laughable San Diego City Council.

There is also something devastating about lame duck-ism in American political life. All too frequently, the lame duck seems more anxious about his post-political future than the issue at hand. He still, however, remains subject to that influence group that wants to retain his seat if not him.

Rather than limiting terms, we might do better to financially enable the candidate without pressure group backing to run a full-fledged campaign.

Legislation that would truly limit campaign spending and allow for the less financially backed candidates to "see the light of day," in terms of television and press exposure, would be a more productive approach than the arbitrary limitation of terms as suggested in either ballot proposition.

But then again, knowing human nature, that might not work either.

Charger question - who suits up on Sunday?

The "Charger mystery of this week" will be answered Sunday at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium in vivid color and hopeful anticipation by hometown fans, the hometown coaching staff, residents of the owner's box, and assorted gridiron folks from around and about.

They are all wondering which team will suit up for Sunday's sell-out shindig with the "Carpet bagging" Raiders. The word is they're playing out of Los Angeles this week.

If the LA Coliseum Commissioners keep their new "Sudsless Sunday" edict alive, beer-drinking ticket-buying Raider fans may revolt and present the Commission with a sober, dry, clean, empty stadium next game day.

There's no telling where the Raiders will end up hanging their helmets after a patron revolt. But that's an LA problem.

San Diego's concern is more an issue of who's gonna play. If the behemoths who suited up for the Chargers at Pittsburgh, two Sundays ago, and were shamed 14-36, return for a second engagement, tar and feathers could be big in supermarket sales next week.

But let's not think of such unpleasant happenings. Rather, let us contemplate the return of the Chargers scheme of gridiron greatness, like Sunday's 39-3 win over the New York Jets.

Oh, Victory. That sweet richness that comes without blame, so close on the deeds that brought nothing but shame.

"Any person who bets on football games is crazy," says former San Diego coach Don Coryell.

No one could have said it better.

What ever happened to the Chargers in just one short week? And more importantly, can they do it again?

The coaches are the same. Even the game plan was similar. It was just the old "just hold 'em on defense and don't make too many serious mistakes on offense" instructions that are routinely passed out in the dressing room before any game.

But, oh how the Chargers listened up this time.

Burt Grossman, a defensive mastodon of the first order, got the first points with a safety. Then the Chargers defensive unit held New York to its lone score, a 22-yard field goal.

And then the fun began. Anthony Miller, who may be the best receiver to wear Charger livery since Lance Alworth, pulled in 5 passes for 100 yards and a pair of TDs. Rod Bernstine collected 80 yards and a TD on 11 carries, as the Chargers ran off 67 plays for 412 total yards against the Jets 148 yards on 47 plays.

Unfortunately, that was last week. But fortunately, the "shaming at Pittsburgh" is already two weeks into history.

Kickoff Sunday brings the Chargers a brand new opportunity for greatness. And you can even watch it at home. The game is a sell-out and will be shown live on Channel 39, cable 7.

Bo Jackson is expected to be back in action Sunday, but the world knows Bo doesn't dig alligators. Charger defenders have their alligator suits all cleaned, pressed and ready for duty.

The Raiders are 5-1 on the early showing and leading the division. What a set up for a knock-down.

The Chargers are showing muscle at a time they play the team everybody loves to hate. It can't get any sweeter than this.

Local Deputy Sheriff defends endorsement of Drown by Deputy Sheriff's Association

Dear Editor:

Sheriff's candidate Capt. Jim Roache claims the incumbent intimidated the Deputy Sheriff's Association into endorsing Assistant Sheriff Jack Drown for the office of Sheriff.

Mine was but one of the votes comprising the 96 percent of the voting membership that endorsed Jack Drown using a secret ballot. The Captain's claim is preposterous and merely an attempt to dismiss what is widely regarded as a very important endorsement.

Without question, it was very courageous for Roache to step forward, call for change, and announce his intention to run against a Sheriff who had held the office for 20 years. However, courage and a platform of change for change's sake does not make a competent Sheriff. When the incumbent decided to retire and Assistant Sheriff Jack Drown entered the race, the citizens of San Diego County were given an opportunity to vote for a man who has a vision of where he wants the Sheriff's Department to go and the clear-cut goals required to take it there. He has the experience and leadership for such a task and the endorsement of the men and women who look to him to lift us out of a dark period. Good intentions aside, Capt. Roache possesses none of these qualities.

I urge you to attend a candidates forum or call the candidates themselves and ask questions. Carefully evaluate them as I did. I am confident you will then cast your vote for Jack Drown as San Diego County Sheriff.

Respectfully,
Greg Barnett

From Where I Sit

by Frank Andrews

When I was a little tyke, 11 or 12, the Saturday matinee at the local movie theater was the hangout for the gang. Double features including comedies or cartoons for a 12 cent admission, including tax. A bag of popcorn or a fountain coke was only a nickel each. After many Saturdays of "Tarzan of the Apes," starring Johnny Weissmuller, he became my hero of the time. Ironically, I got to meet the "Magnificent Hulk" in a Olympic-sized pool belonging to one of the "swells" of Lake Minnetonka. He was engaged by Mr. Vealie, the owner, to teach the local urchins to swim.

I not only learned to swim from this Olympic Champion and famous movie star, but it also bolstered my love for my idol. After much begging, I finally got my Dad to help me build an authentic Tarzan-style tree house, equipped with rope grapevines for me to swing on.

Not having an ape named Cheeta available, I had to do with my faithful "Old Yeller" dog, Sockie. Although he lacked the monkey features to climb trees we solved the problem with a homemade elevator, (a rope and a box).

To complete the scenario, I had to learn the famous "Tarzan Yell." I learned it so well after many hours of rehearsal that I do believe it has effected my voice to this day.

Then it happened. I found my Jane. Now, it was hard to decide which was my best pal, Jane or Cheeta, as I had learned to love them both in a short time and many swings. My tiny tree house became too crowded for these "Three Stooges" so one day while showing off one of my "aerial stunts," I missed the grapevine and fell to the ground.

Me Tarzan, You Who?

I laid on the rocky ground screaming and crying until my Dad came, picked me up, and took me to the doctor. The doctor found a couple cracked ribs so I had to wear tape on my side for a few weeks. That horrible incident not only put an end to the tree house but made me change idols from ape and girl to horse and sidekick.

So after many, many more matinees showing Gene Autry, his horse, Champion and sidekick Smiley Burnette, I was soon begging my Dad for only a horse, as I still had my sidekick, Sockie.

Then, one bright summer day, my father came home towing a huge old swayback bronco for me. I could tell that she was a genuine bronco because I could see the whites of her eyes. When I would stand next to the big steed it looked bigger than one of Budweiser's Clydesdales. I had to use a stepladder to mount my Champion. After many hard falls and saddle sores so bad that I had to eat dinner from the mantle, I became a miniature Gene Autry.

Then one day it happened! As I was racing another mount in a driving rain, my unshod pony slipped on the wet blacktop road. The giant horse slid over on its side with my left leg underneath. Champion got up, shook herself off and took off for the barn, leaving me screaming and crying in the middle of the road.

My leg was broken and badly bruised so it meant another visit to the doctor and months of wearing a cast.

Champion was sent to the glue factory and I was barred from the matinees for a long time or at least until I started to notice girls and my idol worship changed.

Reader supports Drown for Sheriff

Dear Editor,

After watching Carl Siskind's "Close Up" and other forums between the candidates for Sheriff, it has become evident which one San Diego County needs to have as their "Top Cop," and Jack Drown is that man.

Although both men have 20 years on the department, they have not shared the same experiences, Jim Roache's rank of captain would equate in corporate terms as that of a junior executive. While Jack Drown has achieved that of a top executive. Jim Roache has no top management experience and a scant 10 percent of the support, if that, of the department.

San Diego County can't afford on-the-job training for our Sheriff, nor can they afford the time it will take for Jim Roach to earn the respect of the people he would expect to follow him.

We need someone who can get in and do the job now and make the changes needed in the department and community. Jack Drown is the only man who can.

There are many junior executives who aspire to become president of the company, but even though many people aspire to higher positions, they know in their hearts that there is no substitute for experience and respect.

San Diego County needs Jack Drown for their Sheriff!

Vote November 6!

Sincerely,
Carol Cottingham

Writer gets caught up in the swing of things at band rehearsal

by Paul Treske

"What you folks here in River City need is a Band."

These words loosely quoted from the "Music Man" as spoken by Professor Harold Hill, galvanized the good citizens of that Iowa town and millions of Americans as well. Because every town needs a band...to play Sousa marches on Independence Day and "Joy to the world," at Christmas. And, by gosh, East County's got a band!

I've always been a sucker for a band ever since playing the French horn in high school and college!

I've been hopelessly drawn to them whenever they're around. I go to football games to see the bands. I go to parades and band concerts. Whenever a kid comes to the door fund-raising for his high school band, I always give.

And so, the assignment of doing a story on the La Mesa Community Band was a natural. Both Chuck Yates and Warren Torns, the the Bands co-conductors, have invited me to join on previous meetings, but I always demurred. I haven't played since 1949.

The Band rehearses in the band room at Grossmont High School, and it was rapidly filling with musicians when I arrived. The sounds of instruments warming up are like an elixir to me, and I find myself thinking that maybe I really should have brought a horn.

Sort of like George Plimpton, participating in my story subject.

I am greeted by Chuck Yates who immediately re-invites me to play. Dodging rusted musical skills is easy...no horn!

The Band's musicians come from every conceivable walk of life. Trombonist Terry Riggs is a student at UCSD. She's been playing the trombone for eight years and feels that playing with the La Mesa Community Band gives her a chance to polish her skills.

French hornist Jim Lockwood is a project manager at the Naval Ocean Systems Center. He is a charter member of the Band and was originally a clarinetist. He took up the horn to "try something different." His daughter, Lynne, is also in the Band playing flute.

In the brass section, tuba player Milt Emerson is a civil engineer while his partner, sousaphonist Sam Volpe is a funeral director.

When all are seated, the Band warms up with scales. Even here, conductor Yates is demanding; critiquing until a full sonorous brassy sound fills the room.

The first rehearsal number is an offbeat march entitled, Il Bersagliere, (The Italian Rifleman).

The opening note is totally discordant and Yates wrinkles his nose. It takes a while for everyone to warm-up and there are literally dozens of repetitions; but eventually it flows with a big, bright sound and brisk tempo. Yates tells the trumpets to play "very Puccini."

Yates is exacting and sometimes critical in his direction.

"Everyone must make a contribution," he says, "If you consider your part not important, you're not in this band." He is conducting a serious group of musicians.

Christmas music follows; "Joy to the World" seems easier for the musicians. A Christmas pop medley using an Air Force Band arrangement follows, and a whole new mood of joyousness fills the room. As everything goes increasingly upbeat, I find myself wishing I could join in. It was lots of fun back there in the 1940s.

A short break comes, and as if to answer my inner thoughts, Warren Torns shows up with an 'honest-to-gosh' French horn and hands it to me, urging me to sit in.

"I can't remember how to read music," I plead, but he informs me that if I can play a scale (which I still can), I can sit in.

The break ends, and I make the decision. Apologetically, I take a seat next to horn player Tammy Waldschmidt, and in whispers, explain that I haven't played in forty years.

"It'll come back," she assures me.

It didn't exactly! A few notes here or there looked familiar, but most of my efforts were "too little and too late." But sitting in is a wonderful experience. Warren Torns is conducting now, and to be in the middle of a stunning sounding brass section again was like coming home. Quickly forgotten is the fear and uncertainty, replaced by the sheer joy of being, once again, part of a band. I play, right or wrong, surrounded by trombones, trumpets and tubas.

At 9 p.m. exactly, rehearsal ends. Tammy says I did real well. Chuck Yates asks if I am ready to join. Band members and instruments begin to disperse.

Torns talks about where the band has come from and where it's going.

"We've got a lot of people who haven't played for years. But, this is a year of commitment, a year for working on details."

The crowning moment for 1990 will be the December 16th Christmas concert at East County Performing Arts Center. It will be the Band's first performance in that wonderful hall.

I finally leave and find myself doing so reluctantly.

The band is a very solid organization. It is truly representative of East county, with doctors, lawyers, teachers, students and even a funeral director participating.

Who knows, maybe one day soon the La Mesa Community Band will even include a newspaperman.

Avalon and Welcome Home Roxy Carmichael

"Avalon"

The Eastern European immigrant experience is usually seen as a New York story. The sweatshops, the five-story tenement walkups, crowded Lower East Side--that is how the nation has come to view this saga.

However, the stories that I heard and the pictures that I saw when I was growing up in Baltimore spoke of a different experience...the pace was slower, it was not as congested, work was easier to find and living conditions were better.

So out of remembrances of stories told by my grandfather, "Avalon" began.

Director Barry Levinson

The third film in his semi-autobiographical anthology about life in middle-class Baltimore (preceded by "Diner" and "Tin Men"), Barry Levinson's "Avalon" is a nostalgic look at the relationships between three generations of an immigrant family. Chronicling a time span of fifty-years, beginning in 1914, the film centers on Sam Krichinsky, one of five brothers who came to Baltimore, pursuing the American Dream. Years after, Sam annually tells his children and grandchildren the story of the family's history, and of the beauty of his adopted home town.

Armin Mueller-Stahl stars as

Sam, and the East German actor's performance is both witty and touching. Mueller-Stahl's last movie in the U.S. was "Music Box," with Jessica Lange, but that performance lacks the life and energy which he brings to this role. Even though Sam speaks with a heavy accent and lives by the mores of the "old country," it is easy to identify with his character as representative of any father figure. Aidan Quinn ("The Mission" "The Handmaid's Tale") is Sam's son Jules, who embraces modern ideas and is determined to establish his own business. Along with his cousin Izzy (Kevin Pollak), Jules changes his name from Krichinsky to the more acceptable, "American" Kaye, and opens a prosperous discount department store. Co-starring are Elizabeth Perkins ("Big") as Anne Kaye, and Joan Plowright as Sam's wife Eva.

Levinson, who also wrote the screenplay, pulls on the heart strings at all the right moments, balancing comedy with bitter-sweet melodrama. He tends to rely too heavily on dreamy sequences with soaring music, which I assume were meant to get the tears flowing, but that doesn't interfere too much with the film's effectiveness.

Ultimately, "Avalon" is a fine piece of filmmaking, thanks to the universality of its morals. To quote Levinson directly, "Avalon" is about the joy of family, the people you fight with, grow up with, stand beside and love. It's the richest vein of comedy and drama that any filmmaker could ever tap." Enough said.

Critic's Rating: A

"Welcome Home Roxy Carmichael"

Winona Ryder ("Heathers") and Jeff Daniels ("Arachnophobia") star in a small town comedy which examines idol worship and the concept of fame. The residents of Clyde, Ohio turn their lives upside-down when they hear that Roxy Carmichael, the only person ever to leave the town and become famous, is actually coming home for a visit. They turn Roxy's old home into a museum, plan a gala ball, and declare the following seven days as "Roxy Carmichael Week."

But why is Roxy so famous anyway? I guess it's really not important.

The performances are entertaining, and the screenplay, although not too original, is often quite surprising. It's not the best comedy to come around this year, but it's worth a look.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF
PALMER JOHNSON

Case Number: 152972

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate, or both, of: PALMER JOHNSON

A PETITION has been filed by BENNET, PHYLLIS in the Superior Court of California, County of SAN DIEGO

THE PETITION requests that PHYLLIS BENNET be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on OCT 29, 1990 at 1:45 p.m. in Dept. F-5, located at 1501-55 6TH AV/PO BOX 128, San Diego, CA 92102-4104

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Win a trip to the Bahamas by donating at VFW Blood Drive

All donors may enter a free drawing for a trip to Nassau, Bahamas, compliments of US Air, when donating at the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #6874 Blood Drive, at 6873 Federal Boulevard in the lodge room in Lemon Grove.

The public is invited to donate blood on Saturday, October 20 from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.

In addition, all donors will receive a cholesterol screening test performed during routine testing of the blood, and results will be sent to the donor approximately one week after the donation. Each donor receives a medical history review and mini-physical which includes blood pressure, pulse, temperature and iron level checks.

Each donor is entitled to designate his or her donation to cover future blood usage. For instance, family coverage may be obtained by designating one donation for a Blood Assurance Plan, which provides unlimited blood usage free of charge for the donor, spouse, and children under the age of 19. Donors may give in the

The process of donating blood takes about 40 minutes; anyone in good health between the ages of 17 and 70 may give blood.

Lemon Grove doctor says visual skills give athletes an important edge

Most professional and recreational athletes seeking new ways to improve their performance tend to overlook the effectiveness of improved visual skill, according to Dr. Jerome A. Legerton, a vision specialist.

Practicing in both Lemon Grove and Carmel Mountain, Legerton believes eyecare professionals can help athletes of all ages involved in every kind of sports get the edge they're looking for through proper vision care.

"Many athletes do not realize how significantly vision problems limit their performance and reaction time," Legerton said.

He believes the answer to better athletic performance is a simple matter of maximizing visual skills through training, therapy and protective or corrective eye-wear.

Dr. Legerton cited a five year independent study which concluded that the highest failure rate in vision screening tests occurred among football and basketball players who participate on the high school level.

He said the study also shows that even among U.S. Olympic contenders, as many as 60 percent could sharpen their performance and gain a competitive edge by improving their visual skills.

It has also been noted that many athletes who participate in sports activities, but are not functioning at optimum levels, are more prone to injury due to deficient vision.

"Fortunately," said Dr. Legerton, the number of eyecare professionals and organizations that share a common interest and concern for the visual health and safety of athletes has grown tremendously in the past few years."

Legerton feels professional athletes are finally becoming more aware of the correlation between optimum vision and performance.

"Visual fitness (or "sports vision") is gaining as much attention as "physical" fitness, and Legerton hopes it will continue to do so through the nineties.

Sports vision is defined as the ability to see well, to recognize and to react, according to Legerton.

In 1984, an organization was founded by Dr. A.I. Garner to place emphasis on, promote and advance research, development and education in sports vision.

Legerton is a member of this organization, the International

Academy of Sports Vision (NASV), which has led to better and wider understanding of sports vision problems, and to improved vision for sports participants worldwide.

The International Academy of Sports Vision is a multi-disciplinary organization comprised of vision care professionals, athletic trainers, coaches and team physicians from throughout the world.

"The NASV encourages ophthalmologists, opticians and optometrists to offer vision screening and eyecare services to athletes involved in high school, college and league sports activities in their communities," Legerton said.

As pioneers in the field of sports vision, the NASV membership is committed to increasing the awareness of the vital role vision plays in sports. Its members are offered continuing education opportunities through seminars and the annual Sportsvision Conferences and Exhibition held in a major U.S. city each summer.

Members are also kept up-to-date on the latest sports vision developments and state-of-the-art equipment for testing and treatment.
